GENERAL NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

August Belmont on Resumption

NEW YORK Nov 21—August Belmont says he considers that it is utterly impossible to break the government on resumption At the same time he seems somewhat apprehensive that between now and the first of January there may be created an artificial demand for the precious metal and that some temporary difficulties may be thrown in the way of the government but he thinks the government is financially very strong

CHICAGO Nov 21—A man has been noticed in London, Portugal who it is claimed is Chas W Angell defaulting secretary of the Pullman Palace Car Co and cablegrams and correspondence with Secretary Swarts revealing his identification and extradition have been passing for three days It is very much doubted by a majority of people here whether he is the man wanted He will be seen and identified if he be Angell in a few days

Failures Under the Bankrupt Law

NEW YORK, Nov 21—Statistics show that the total number of proceedings under the bankrupt law during its eleven years existence, was a little above 130 000 of which 1500 were in the Pacific states In California the number was nearly 2 700 out of 21 000 dealers. It is estimated that the aggregate failures in the whole country was only 35 per cent of the whole number of dealers and manufacturers during the 11 years It is suggested that only fourteen bankruptcies yearly in each thousand dealers is not unusual ruin.

Speculation in Wheat

NEW YORK, Nov 21—The rumor that Jim Keene is manipulating a combination for a heavy wheat speculation in Chicago gains credence The parties are said to base their opinions on a calculation that purchases for storage at present prices can be carried until spring at such cost that the wheat can then be sold with a profit of 30 cents in Chicago or 10-64 here, which is 25 cents below the average for the past ten years Later Dispatch on the Chicago Wheat Market.

CHICAGO, Nov 21—The wheat corner has shown very moderate indications to develop to-day and prices on the whole have advanced but a trifle There are said to be strong bear interests here which may cause the New York operators to sell out much short of the figure they have fixed The dispatches received you yesterday from here is not believed in its entirety by operators and speculators on 'change. At one time to day wheat was quite weak and took a considerable drop, while the advance during the whole only been three cents Speculation and transactions to day are not unusually heavy, though nervous and excited The condition of the market would ordinarily have created heavy business

WASHINGTON, Nov 21—The letter of Secretary Schurz on Indian affairs to the secretary of war reached Gen Sherman after its publication. The document has been forwarded to Lieut Gen Sheridan with the request that he communicate such facts as he may be in possession of sustaining his assertions against the conduct of the Indian service.

Our Navy.

WASHINGTON, Nov 21—The estimates for support of the navy for the next fiscal year are about the same as the sum appropriated during the last session by congress viz $13,000,000 The report of the secretary will show that appropriations have not only been confined within their proper limits but have left a small balance to the credit of the navy department and marine corps, and an estimate shall order the building of new vessels The secretary, with the means asked for will put those we now have more efficient and keep them in good repair Our navy is in much better condition than a year ago and is well adapted to peace establishments but in case of war with a foreign power 90 days for hostile purposes could at once be added. These include 15 monitors and 6 rams for coast defense, together with two different torpedo boats

Britain and Afghanistan—Practical Declaration of War

LONDON Nov 1—This morning's Standard announces the reply to the British ultimatum received from the ameer of Afghanistan and the orders accordingly have been sent to India for the troops to advance The government has published a long dispatch from Lord Cranbrook secretary of state for India to Lord Lytton viceroy of India recapitulating the negotiations with Afghanistan The dispatch traces the first engagement between England and the ameer of Afghanistan to the refusal of the Gladstone government in 1873 to give a definite answer as to how far they would help him if he was threatened by Russia The dispatch points out that on the accession of the present government relations of England with Afghanistan had to be considered with reference to the rapid march of events in Turkistan Consequently when Lord Lytton was sent to India he was instructed in order to counteract the protection hereviously solicited Namely substantial pecuniary aid recognition of his dynasty and a pledge of material support against unprovoked foreign aggression conditionally upon the ameer allowing the British government to have access to positions in his territory except Cabul where they could acquire trustworthy intelligence of events likely to threaten the tranquility and independence of Afghanistan Such access was necessary as a substantial proof of the unity of the ameer's interests with those of Great Britain The abortive sending of the mission to Cabul and the refusal of the ameer to receive it was in accordance with the wishes of the British government. The capture of Khiva by the forces of the czar in the spring of 1873 and total subordination of the Khanate to Russia caused Sheer Ali considerable alarm and led him to question the value of pledges given by the czar to England and communicated by King Saud to the ameer Lord Northbrook was prepared to assure the ameer that under certain conditions the government of India would assist him to repel unprovoked aggression but her majesty's government at home did not share his brightness apprehension and the viceroy ultimately informed the ameer that the discussion of the question would be postponed to a more convenient season. The effect of this announcement on his highness although conveyed in courteous language was not favorable and the policy which dictated it was unintelligible to his mind and he received it with feelings of chagrin and disappointment. His reply was couched in terms of ill-disguised sarcasm He took no notice of the viceroy's proposal to depute a British officer to examine the northern frontier of Afghanistan and he subsequently refused permission to Sir Douglas Forsyth to return from Kashgar to India through Cabul He left untouched an amount of money lodged to his credit by the Indian government and generally assumed towards it an attitude of sullen reserve Such was the position of affairs when her majesty's present advisers assumed office

The maintenance of Afghanistan as a strong friendly power had at all times been the object of British policy That object had not met with the success that was desirable but its accomplishment was nevertheless a matter of grave importance and it had now to be considered in reference to the rapid march of events in Turkistan Her majesty's government could not view with indifference the probable influence of these events upon the character of an Asiatic prince whose dominions were thereby brough within a steadily narrowing circle between the great military empires and although no immediate danger appeared to threaten British interests on the frontier of Afghanistan the position in Central Asia had become sufficiently grave to suggest the necessity of timely precaution

Her majesty's government considered that the first step necessary was the improvement of their relations with the ameer himself and consequently when Lord Lytton was sent to India he was instructed to offer the ameer the protection he previously solicited, namely Substantial pecuniary aid recognition of his dynasty and a pledge of material support against unprovoked foreign aggression conditionally upon the ameer allowing British agents to have access to positions in his territory except Cabul where they could acquire trustworthy intelligence of events likely to threaten the tranquility and independence of Afghanistan such access was necessary as a substantial proof of the unity of the ameers interests with those of Great Britain

The abortive sending of the mission to Cabul and of Sir Lewis Pelly is then narrated and the facts brought out that offers to the ameer were exceptional liberal and the demands upon him not oppressive but he met both as a rehearsal of his grievance dating from 1857 And though negotiation at Peshawar were terminated by the death of the envoys yet Sheer Ali's hauteur and conduct had been so intolerable as to justify Lord Lytton in assuming that his overtures were practically rejected

The ameer persisted in his unfriendly attitude and two years ago declined to receive a British envoy even temporarily within his territory on the ground that he could not guarantee his safety and would not thereafter be left with any excuse for declining to receive the Russian missions He welcomed with every appearance of ostentation an embassy from the czar dispatched to his court at a time when there were indications that an interruption of friendly relations between this country and Russia might be imminent.

It was proposed therefore to demand the reception of a mission to Cabul headed by an officer of rank in the person of General Sir Neville Chamberlain with a short staff and family are to remain in high esteem by the ameer The conduct of the ameer in refusing to receive the mission was wholly without just cause He was aware from numerous communications addressed to him from your excellency's predecessors that the Russian government had given assurances to the government of her majesty to regard his territories as completely beyond its sphere of action He was equally aware that the whole policy of the British government since his accession to the throne had been to strengthen his power and authority and to protect him from foreign aggression although his methods adopted for doing so may not have accorded with his highness own ideas He had received from the British government evidences of good will manifested by large gifts of money and arms as well as by its successful efforts in obtaining from the czar's government a fixed boundary agreeable to himself between his kingdom and the neighboring khanates His subjects had been allowed to pass freely throughout India to the great benefit of the trade and commerce of his country and in no single instance has the ameer himself or any of his people been treated unjustly or inhospitably within British jurisdiction

The Daily Oregonian.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 22, 1878.

THE MANUFACTURING PROBLEM.

Wonder has often been expressed why manufacturing industry has not had more rapid growth among us. We have great advantages in many kinds of raw materials, including timber, wool, iron, coal, hides, and many other articles; and in most parts of the country there is unequaled water power and all other facilities that might be desired. But capital has been wary of investment in most of the leading lines of manufacturing industry. The main reason is want of a sufficiently extensive market among a limited population. Small manufacturing establishments can no longer operate with profit. They cannot compete with great establishments which produce special lines of goods in enormous quantities, and make their profits out of the mere magnitude of their their transactions. Nobody now could make it pay to build wagons here, considerable as the market already is, because there are great establishments elsewhere which turn them out by thousands, have a wide market, and possess every facility for making them at the lowest possible rate. In time this will change, but not until there is a market here which will support factories great as any elsewhere. Take an illustration in another line. For several years our state has been producing on a limited scale certain lines of woolen goods. When a factory can run on one class of goods exclusively it can produce a cheaper and better fabric than when it changes from one to another. It loses in time and skill with every change; and if it declines to change it cannot hold the market. In every branch of manufacturing industry business has now been reduced to such system that each establishment must take a special line and stick to it. Hence success can be gained only by having a large market; and hitherto it has not been practicable for us to organize an industry which could compete with old establishments for markets outside of our own borders, or indeed to much extent within them. One who has occasionally contributed to THE OREGONIAN writing on this topic says: "In the employment of labor there is also a difficulty. One factory cannot draw many skilled workmen to itself. Frequently, when most needed, workmen leave, and they cannot be replaced. But a number of factories will attract operatives, who will be ready on call. On the other hand, laborers like to change employers, which they can do without leaving the country if several mills are running. Such division of labor brings greater results in these as it does in all enterprises. Once our hardware stores kept boots and shoes and other dry goods. It is better for them and for the public that they keep only hardware. It is better for one mill to turn out one or two classes of fabrics and to multiply mills for the supply of more varieties and greater quantities. In this way ships will be attracted hither for our fabrics as they are for our wheat and other cereals. Business will thus be put upon a solid basis, and thousands of the now unemployed will abide with us, and take active part in our industrial growth."

THE NEXT DIFFICULTY.

In what way the presence of the silver dollar embarrasses resumption, is clearly shown by an analysis of the subject presented by the Chicago Times. The law authorizes the secretary of the treasury to redeem greenbacks after the 1st January next either in silver dollars or in gold coins. But will the silver option work in practice? This question has already arisen to vex the cabinet. A Washington special to the Times explains the manner in which the secretary is embarrassed: "Shall I pay out gold alone, and hold the silver in reserve lest the gold should become exhausted?" he asks. "No," the cabinet respond. "That would tend to induce a rush for gold. You must betray no fear, and hold no silver threat in reserve. That would spoil everything." "Shall I pay out the silver first?" the secretary then asks. "No," is the response. "That would be resuming upon the silver basis. It would place a premium on gold, and drive it out of circulation entirely." "Shall I give holders of greenbacks their choice between gold and silver?" once more the secretary asks. "Perhaps," is the reply. "We do not clearly see what else you can do." And this we are told, is what is likely to be done. But this will simply be resumption on the gold basis, since the holders of greenbacks will make choice of gold every time. Even the author of the silver bill in congress and all his supporters will take their places in line at the treasury window, and their "option," in every instance, will be gold. But if the treasury proceeds thus with resumption in gold, we shall have a reviva of the "gold-bug" outcry all over the country. On the other hand, if it proposes to redeem the notes in silver, then specie resumption will simply mean silver resumption, sooner or later. Out of this dilemma there is no way except through repeal of the silver law. These considerations show that the currency fight is not yet ended. Resumption on the gold basis, with elimination of the disturbing silver factor, is the only thing that will put a stop to the agitation, or an end to dishonest experiments.

From Eastern Oregon complaints are continually coming about the management of the mail. So inefficient is the service that we have long been obliged to send THE OREGONIAN to most places in that section by express. Business is deranged by an injudicious organization of the routes, and upon some of them the mails have not been carried with anything approaching to regularity. One of the most serious of the mistakes is observed in the change of route from the Dalles to Willow Forks and Heppner, instead of sending the mail directly through by Umatilla to Pendleton. The main route is made to take a long detour to the south, and the central point of the shipping and other business of that section—Umatilla Landing—is supplied only by a "back swing" from Pendleton. Derangement of business in consequence of this immethodical disposition of the routes produces constant annoyance, inconvenience and loss. The mail ought to go through on the direct route, and Heppner and other points similarly situated should be supplied by special service. Postal Agent Steel, we are informed, is mainly responsible for the present arrangement or misarrangement of the routes. To the business community of this section, including merchants and freighters, whose business is all necessarily done through Umatilla, the mails managed on this system are of no use whatever.

Labor and capital are always in quest of each other, yet there always appears to be an irrepressible conflict between them. Dr. Hitchcock of New York has written a book on Socialism, in which he argues that "a thoroughly good understanding between labor and capital is of equal importance to both of them." This sounds at first like a wise saw, but after all isn't it quite a useless platitude? It is evident that the "thoroughly good understanding" never can be reached, and that it is not desirable it should be reached. For the fact is that in the struggle growing out of opposing interests of labor and capital industrial progress alone is possible. Each side must look out sharply for its own interests the workingman to prevent oppression and get as good wages as he can, and the capitalist to prevent losses and make gains. On this basis there is no room for a thoroughly good understanding, and theorists and sentimentalists know nothing of practical value about the matter.

Prof. David Swing, a noted preacher of Chicago, a few days since preached a sermon on "Doubts," in which he marked a wide distinction between doubt and what is termed impiety or infidelity. Parallel with faith, he remarked, there has always run a stream of skepticism. The growth of reason will always be attended by an immense denial of old propositions; and doubt often signifies merely the effort of an era to find a deeper and better meaning in its popular religion. "The doubt" will always attend the human race, because the future life is not a demonstrated reality; but out of doubt comes perpetual study and a movement of mankind from the less true to the more true. It is doubt alone that makes sectarian differences. One hundred sects mean simply one hundred forms of unbelief. Doubt however, is not wholly a destruction, but is partly a building up of a new world.

The verdict of the jury in the Avery (alias Brown) case will be accepted by the community as a righteous one. It is needless to descant on the enormity of the crime or the justice of the punishment which the law has provided. For the vindication of the law, the enforcement of justice and the protection of society it is necessary that measures be taken and enforced against a class of criminals, who mean nothing less than the terrors of capital punishment will restrain. These extreme rigors of the law are not for vengeance, but for justice and for the conservation of society; and in cases like these we should not so much regret to employ them as the necessity which compels us to employ them.

In a talk to his neighbors on the eve of the late election Gov. Seymour of New York appealed to those present to use their reason about questions which concerned themselves and their families, and not to puzzle their brains respecting the currency. When we can sell what we raise and sell more than we buy, then we must be prosperous; but when we are compelled to buy more than we are able to sell, the end is sure to be bankruptcy and ruin. The solution of all our problems, be assured his neighbors, lies in industrious attention to our own business, letting theories and barren speculations alone

It is natural perhaps, for one to manifest some uneasiness over publicity of the fact that the Tilden managers took it for granted that he could be bought as an elector for $5,000; but it isn't our fault if the Statesman editor is having vexation on this score. We have assumed nothing in the premises and made no charges. When the ex-elector gets through explaining the phenomena of this remarkable estimate of electoral virtue entertained by the Tilden agents it will be time to proceed with other phases of the Gabble fraud.

BUTLER ON HIS DEFEAT.

The Butler organ in Boston has a statement from the "great defeated," which undertakes an explanation of the causes of his defeat. He says:

Cool reasoning would have assured me that it was next to impossible to win. Every federal office holder, including seven custom houses and their dependents there; every postmaster, with all his clerks and dependents; every state officer, amounting to more than one thousand, and drawing pay from the state; every county officer and every city officer of the eighteen cities, with two exceptions, and their retainers, employes, and dependents; nearly all the combined press of the state, including the religious weeklies, one of which, at least, I know had been subsidized previously against me; a large portion of the clergy, especially those located over churches highly ornamented with painted windows; nearly or quite all the higher graded schoolmasters whose salaries, made high in flush times, have not come down, but would in case of reform; all the treasurers and superintendents and agents of manufactories and corporations, of whom the same may be said; all of the colleges who are dependent on the state, and yet whose property, used for income, escapes taxation; the hired officers of nearly all the railroads, whose salaries are enormous while the dividends of the stockholders are small—were all combined against me. Of these, all who had men in their employ or control were advised to use civilized bulldozing upon the employes and workmen against me strongly, urgently and bitterly. Added to this was the whole force of the administration and two cabinet officers, one of whom was brought here to speak to the men of his own race; an organization of both of the old political parties; the combined organized capital and the state and national banks; the managers of the savings banks, controlling $243,000,000 of capital, many of whom did not desire that the stewardship of the money intrusted to them should be looked into, some of them old, gray-headed men, who were found so zealous as to bear torches in the night in procession, and the best orators of the party brought from the several states. A willing presidential candidate from Maine; a willing senator with presidential hopes, from New York; the two senators from my old state, without any hopes at all, except to save themselves, with eight representatives in congress, speaking, to save themselves, against me, with neither of the other two saying a word in my behalf; with many members of the bar of Massachusetts, some of whom earned more fees for their services in the campaign than they have earned during the year, together with the collector of the port of Boston, and a large number of custom house officers—made an oratorical force which should have been competent to annihilate any cause less just, less dear to the people, and less important to the safety and welfare of the nation. These facts demonstrate that the people of the state were with me at heart, and the majority of the people not holding office, or their relatives not holding office, voted for me. Nearly 110,000 of the voters of the state stood for me, in spite of all this, and it ought to more than satisfy the reasonable ambition of any man."

Strength and Weakness of the Democratic Party.

(From the Chicago Tribune.)

The Democratic party has this immense advantage—a solid south. To be sure, it is both a strength and a weakness. For were it to assert the equality of northern individual Democrats with southern individual Democrats by pressing to the front policies intended for the benefit of the whole country instead of for the benefit of the south, it would soon gain at the north. But in gaining at the north it would lose at the south, and the temptation of a "solid south" is too great for the power of resistance of the average northern Democrat. This vassalage of the northern to the southern wing of the Democratic party is the bane of the politics of the country. It keeps the south in a fever of hope and the north in a fever of fear.

Fred Douglass on the Southern Question.

[Washington Special, Nov. 14.]

Fred. Douglass, being interviewed on the president's southern policy, stated that he had looked for the result which has come, and had so expressed himself to the president when the policy was inaugurated. The president had at that time assured him that the colored people would be protected in all their rights. The interviewer finally asked, "What do you think will be the result of the departure, if there is a new departure of the administration, in dealing with the south?" "Most salutary," was the reply; "I think the south itself will see its errors and correct them. It will, I believe, find out that a solid south is dangerous, even to itself, when secured by disfranchising the freedmen. It will, after learning the reason, be its duty to grant equal rights to all."

The Democratic Outlook not Brilliant.

[From the Buffalo Courier (Dem.)]

We are now midway between two presidential elections and it must be freely admitted that the outcome of the contest of 1880 looks more uncertain than Democrats believed and hoped that it would be. Obviously the Democracy cannot afford to commit any new blunders or indulge in bitter feuds among themselves. They must be united in fighting the common enemy. The present reverse should have a tendency to harmonize the party and nerve it for future contests. If such should be the effect, the party will soon recover all that it has lost this year, and in addition gain complete control of the national government.

"Like Lazarus—as if I had been licked by dogs," bitterly remarked a defeated candidate in Canada, when asked how he felt.

VERDICT OF GUILTY.

The testimony in the case of State vs Archie Brown, on trial in the state circuit court for murder in the first degree—the robbery of Walter O Shea and killing of Louis Joseph—was concluded yesterday Mr F Kelley, deputy district attorney made the opening argument in behalf of the state He made a strong, logical and effective appeal Mr. Mulkey was followed by Judge W W Page, who spoke in behalf of the defense Considering the character of the evidence, which was strong and conclusive against his client, Judge Page made a very able and eloquent plea. He was followed by his colleague, J M Gessle, Esq., who made a brief but effective argument in behalf of the defendant. Hon John F Caples, district attorney made the closing argument for the prosecution His speech was strong with the eloquence of truth. He reviewed the testimony from the commencement of the dreadful tragedy to its sequel, commented upon it logically and ably, and without any unfair attempt to create a prejudice of horror The legal phases of the case he presented forcibly and plainly, and proved every statement by standard authorities. It has been many a year since a more comprehensive more logical or more eloquent forensic effort has been made before an Oregon court Following Mr. Caples' speech came the charge by Judge Bellinger and the jury retired for deliberation. The jury retired about 5 o'clock P M After deliberating some time the jury came in a agreement with a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment. The court informed them that such a verdict was informal, that they must find a verdict of either guilty of murder in the first or second degree

The jury retired, but soon came in with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree Judge Page, one of the counsel for the prisoner, asked to have the jury polled One of the jurymen however, when asked if he was satisfied with the verdict answered in the negative Again the jurors were sent out by the court for further deliberation about fifteen minutes the jury came into court with an unqualified verdict of murder in the first degree The counsel for the defense asked for time in which to file a motion for a new trial and the court granted seven days

M for Celilo There being no engineer in Walla Walla the train was sent from Wallula to Whitman to meet the sheriff coming down The engine struck a horse knocking two cars off the track Conductor Macauley was caught between the cars and very seriously injured He was reported killed last evening, but this morning it is thought he may possibly recover

AMUSEMENTS

DAN CRAWLEY—This beautiful play was rendered for the last time last evening at New Market Theater The piece was produced in a very satisfactory manner and elicited much applause Mr Mayo was very natural easy and charming Miss Woolridge did unusually well The supporting cast was good and the mounting of the play was magnificent

MAN AND WIFE—This new drama to be presented this evening at New Market Theater is from the pen of Mr Mayo who paints the character of Geoffrey Delamere The play is founded on the celebrated story of the same name by Wilkie Collins without doubt the best of his many romances. The story is a satire on the loose marriage laws of Scotland and the prevailing tendencies of the aristocracy of England to allure the development of the muscular powers at the expense of the intellectual The heroine Anne Sylvester Miss Jean Clara Walters is made the victim of the insidious machinations of Lieut Geoffrey De Amalric with the promise of marriage betrays her He has made an appointment to meet her at an old inn where the ceremony is to be performed In the meantime he has received a telegram telling of his father's sudden illness and travels back to summoned home his self interested father's wishes In this dilemma he enlists the good offices of his friend Arnold Brinkworth to whom he relates the true state of affairs Arnold agrees to go to the inn It has been agreed that Geoffrey is going there should ask for Anne as his wife Of course Arnold seeing no harm in taking his friend's place and asking for the lady as his wife Arnold marries Anne at the inn where she mistrusts that she has been betrayed and Arnold in his endeavor to reconcile her is surprised by his own lady love Blanche (Miss Woodthorpe) and her uncle Sir Patrick (Mr Lindsay) An old servant Bishop Rigs (Mr Ward) who is not unacquainted with the Scotch marriage laws has secured the letter Geoffrey has written to Anne which is nothing less than a promise of marriage and to which he has subscribed himself Your loving husband that is to be Armed with this epistle he in the subsequent act finds the party and in a spirit of revenge to repay an assault on him by Geoffrey gives the letter to Anne whom he finds proclaiming her right to Delamere to Mrs Glenarm (Miss Alice) Geoffrey's now love a widow who is possessed of $10 000 a year Geoffrey who has been training for a boat race has so overcome his overtaining that he goes stale and appears at the trial which causes his completely broken down The evidence so completely establishes the justice of Anne's claim that matters are adjusted at this point but Geoffrey seems filled with a brutal desire of revenge and claims that as the law makes that woman my wife the same law also compells her to go with her husband He takes her to his lodgings kept by a dumb woman Mrs Bethridge (Miss Wade) Geoffrey has by accident discovered that Mrs Bethridge is only assuming dumbness and that the cause is made apparent in a secret confession she has made and which Geoffrey contrives to obtain in which she declares herself a murderess and that her victim was her husband whom so ill treated her that she was driven to the act for self protection In the confession she recites the means by which she accomplished the taking off Geoffrey holds the secret as a threat, and compels her to aid him in the killing of his wife This half crazy being is subject to passions in which she seems to be impelled to strangle persons Twice has she the pulse so seized her when looking on Geoffrey but each time she has mastered it. As they are about to commit the act of murder the springs upon him (Geoffrey) and strangles him.

This brief synopsis barely touches the outlines of one of the most effective plays ever produced Its run in New York was unprecedented and what makes it a matter of more than ordinary drama interest was the medium through which the now famous actress Clara Morris made her great reputation in New York playing the part for eight months Mr Mayo's Geoffrey is pronounced one of the most realistic portrayals on the stage—entirely at variance with his Crockett yet equally as great The cast at the New Market embraces the entire force and we may look for a dramatic treat of rare excellence

CHINAMAN KILLED

Tuesday evening, about 8 o'clock a Chinaman employed at the saw mill of Mr Durham, a short distance from Oswego met with a sudden and awful fate The Chinaman was engaged with several others in rolling a log over on the carriage He was standing on the outside of the log and was endeavoring to pry it up, when the hold suddenly gave away Before he could possibly save himself he fell backward striking against the saw The lower part of his back came in contact with the saw, which almost instantly cut him in twain He died instantly The mangled remains were placed in a box and brought to the city Wednesday for interment.

The Value of Swimming

[From the London Standard]

Among the few survivors from the terrible wreck of the Princess Alice are the ex mee members of the same family—Mr Thorpe of the old kent road a young man seventeen years of age his sister Miss Thorpe who is a year older than himself and his brother a mere boy of nine All three owe the lives to the fact that they were able to swim When the the terrible crash was heard and the doomed vessel began to settle down these three children—for children they almost are in years if not in courage and presence of mind—found themselves struggling in the water The boys at would seem were somehow separated from their sister They were both picked up by the same boat and were when it helped them from their perilous position swimming side by side The sister who was older than either achieved her own safety She struck boldly out and in spite of the incumbrance of her garments the force of the tide the darkness of the night and the danger to which she was not but have been subject to by the frantic efforts of those who were struggling around her in the water to catch and cling to any object within their grasp succeeded in reaching the bank It is but a little short of a miracle that under such circumstances a mere girl not twenty years of age worsted with her heavy woman's dress, bewildered by the suddenness of the catastrophe frightened—as she must have been—by the terrible nature of the scene and helpless for want of her natural protectors should have been able single handed to save her life The feat is the more remarkable when we bear in mind the fact that Miss Thorpe is not—as are some young women of her age—a swimmer of eminence That she can hold her own gallantly in the water the result has sufficiently shown But she is merely an English girl who like her brothers has been taught to swim She has never attempted the distance from London bridge to Greenwich she has never so far as appears competed for any prize and we are not for the fact that she owes her life to her own skill and presence of mind her ability to defy a sharp current on a cold chill dark night would be no matter of puolic record and yet the exploit she accomplished is if we consider it almost marvelous The tide was rushing swiftly down the water must have been cold and benumbing the night as we know was dark and foggy there were round about her all the horrors of the scene the last farewell was rising from river to sky in the water the struggles were appalling in their last agony each with each—and yet through all these horrors she fought her way with a calm quiet could not which men who have stood under fire and confronted death in other and even more sudden shapes might well envy her

NOTES FROM YAKIMA

YAKIMA CITY W T Nov 13 1878

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I am sorry our county which is largely Republican only gave Brents four majority It can only be accounted for from the fact that the Republicans can no longer be forced to wear the party yoke and permit a few political grounds to make the nominations and then present the ticket no matter how ludicrous it is the party Such a result resulted in the election of three Democrats on the county ticket with the exception of Farnsworth for representative and Masters auditor The democratic ticket was a party to Brents

Our people read THE OREGONIAN and endorse its views I see we go for men and not for party no matter if the nominees are such men that is composed good honest capable men Democrats as well as Republicans are well satisfied with the result and think it a fair deal that our county interests will not suffer in the hands of Democratic officers Indian matters are for the present quiet and our county is fast filling up with a good intelligent class of progressive people

The amount of capital available in the way of loanable funds is very considerable with no important inquiry from borrowers. As we approach the end of the year, there is a great desire on part of wholesale merchants to obtain settlements with their country customers, but the slowness with which remittances are made is rather discouraging. It is reported that interior merchants are doing a great deal more than usual at this season year, a fact which is due to the past condition of the grain market, it having been so much depressed that farmers did not sell, and therefore could not square up with the retailer, who in turn was unable to meet his obligations to the wholesale merchant.

With much regret we learn of the suspension of N. Ten Bosch & Co., of San Francisco, who for past years have done a very large commission business. Through their straightforwardness and activity, they managed, in the face of many competitors, to get the confidence of the California and Oregon houses, who always were ready to intrust them with firm offers to sell cargoes in England. Their suspension is due solely to the late heavy failures in England and California, in which they were involved. They managed to pull through, but more failures came, resulting in a large number of high chartered ships in California and Oregon being thrown on their hands. The firm, we are informed, owes nobody in Oregon, and it is said neither in San Francisco. The loss falls on shipowners abroad. We are pleased to learn from reliable authority that this failure in no wise affects the pecuniary standing of J. M. Ten Bosch, who is doing business as a commission merchant in this city on his own account, and has commended himself to many of the business people for his integrity, energy and activity in their behalf.

In the produce market there is a moderate degree of activity, and in some cases dealers who are in need of grain and flour to make up cargoes have paid an advance of 2½ cents per cental for wheat above our last quotations, though the market is but little if any higher than at our last review. Holders are generally 5 to 10 cents above the best offers of shippers, but occasional transactions are reported, the range being $1 62½@1 67½. Oats, hay and mill feed are in fair demand at our quotations. Provisions of choice quality are in good demand at full rates. Dairy products are much inquired for, and for eggs the market is brisk, with an insufficient supply to meet the wants of dealers. Poultry is abundant and prices low. Other products are unchanged.

DR. A. M. BRENAN.

His Wonderful Success

IN THE TREATMENT OF ALL

Chronic and Private Diseases,

He has astonished the People of this Coast by his skillful Operations.

HE HAS TAUGHT IN HIS

public and private lectures the true principles of health and life to both male and female. He has also warned them against habits that would be likely to produce disease, in plain and comprehensive language. But where he has found them crushed and broken down by disease, mentally and physically, he has restored them to health and happiness, for it is well understood that without health there can be no happiness.

has made a specialty in the treatment of the following diseases: Catarrh, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the throat and chest, by an entirely new system, only known to himself. Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, including Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness or premature loss of Manhood. In the treatment of these diseases he has made a world-wide reputation by his astonishing success, not only on this Coast but throughout the whole United States. Diseases of the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys as well as all diseases of the blood and skin he has become master of, and never fails to give relief at once, and permanently cures the case if he is applied to in time.

THE DOCTOR HAS GIVEN SPECIAL LECTURES to ladies only for years and is perfectly familiar with all female complaints, and understands their delicate and refined organization, as well as the proper remedies which should be used to allay their suffering and restore them to perfect health.

THE DOCTOR HAS THIS ADVANTAGE

over most physicians—he can tell the patients' disease the moment he comes in contact with them without any aid from the individual. This account in part for his great professional success.

All surgical operations can be performed by his skillful hand, and the patient need not fear the result.

will send to those living at a distance and who cannot well visit him office a list of Printed Questions and by the answers when filled out he can tell the disease as well as the proper treatment almost as well as seeing the patient personally, and will forward the proper medicines, or instruments, to any part of the country with full instructions and advice. Each letter requiring advice or list of questions, must contain two postage stamps.

Everything strictly confidential and honorable.

THE DOCTOR

has studied in the best Medical Schools in Europe and three years in the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, as more than one of the Medical men of the Medical Faculty in this State can testify.

CAUTION.

Persons coming to Portland, requiring medical treatment of the proper kind, who desire to consult with me, will please beware of persons who may try to coax them away to other so-called Doctors, through pretended friendship for the patients. Look out for them; they are knaves, prompted by selfish motives and what they can make. Be sure and ask for DR. PAUL M. BRENAN, the Medical Lecturer, and read his sign on his door.
